We copy from the New York Tribune is letter reviewing the recent battles fit Virginia, in which Gen. Pope is severely himsel for alleged incompetency on the hid of Saturday, and especially for persisting the rebels to get in his rear at Manages, when he had repeated warnings of the day, without knowing aught the matter beyond what is there stated. The Washington Republican states that Gen. Pope has been relieved of his command, at his own request, for the purpose of preferring charges in person against Generals Fitz John Porter and Summer, is disobedience of orders. It is intended, ise, that s court of inquiry will soon be lings. This is what the people want. Let itse be light!

secount of the fights with the following observations:

The battle which took place near Richmond, Ry, on the 19th and 30th of August hat, should be called the battle of Rogersville, the first and decisive engagement having been fought about a half mile from a small cluster of houses called Rogersville, located about five miles beyond Richmond, on the tumplic leading through that town to Lexington. I have heard it named the battle of Mount Zion, from a church near the first scene of action; also the battle of Richmond, because it all occurred near to and part of it in that place. By whatever designation it may be known, it was an avowedly disastrons affair—an evenithat has led to re-nite more logarious to the tederal causes than any battle fought in the field. It was, in reality, making one pri vate citizen meet three disciplined soldiers of the field. Instead of bringing on an ongagement beyond Richmond, the federal forces should

PICIL MELSON'S" FIGHTING.

Consider the number of our forces in the morning, the fact that they had been panicstricken twice, and that they had already lost upwards of 800 in killed and wounded, and it will be apparent that the remnant was not large enough to make a formidable stand.

But General Nelsou had arrived from Lexington, and was determined that the day slould not be lost so early. He knew well the result that awaited him—indeed, as soon as he heard that General Manson had prought on an engagement with Kirby Smith's forces, he sent a courier to Richmond to order all the begages and supply trains to be sent this side of the Kentnoky River.

The Gastite's correspondent, speaking of his own cap ure, says:

The reason why the rebels did not pursue our men after the battles below Richmond, was now apparent. They knew they had us in their power, and wishing to capture the entire army, they had been playing with us all day, in order to give their exarly time to make a circuit of the country and come in our the Lexington road, some distance above town, thereby closing the mouth of the bag into which they were slawly out teadily driving us. A few of their small howitzers had also been moved with their cavalry, and were now playing upon such of our men as still remained in the road. This more was a masterly one, and might have been an injusted, though it could not have been prevented. It resulted in the capture of 2,000 or 3,000 men, all our artillery, and the entire wagon train.

At the general approached the battle field, he wheesaed a part of the stampede and became highly examprated at h. I am told that he fired at several men who refused to stop their retreat at his bidding, and that he killed one or two and wounded three others. I cannot speak with certainty as to this, but I know that the general is not over politic to his soliciters at any time, is quite profune at others, and under such circumstances as hose which surrounded him on Saturday afternoon, he would do many things that in a normal condition of affairs would be called creel and inhuman. It is not asserted that the slaveholders are looking forward the slaveholders are looking forward slaveholders are looking forward to any such hastening fate for their pet institution, but yet, however, they may plot, and labor and fight, there is a Nemesis in human affairs; it is known that there is a destiny that shapes our ends; and though man may propose, God will dispose. every man called into the field."

There was some expectation here last night that a number of Stuart's cavairy would make an attempt to interrupt railway communication between Baltimore and Washington. The rebels in Baltimore fully expected it. Intelligence was brought here last night that rebel cavalry were seen attempting to cross the Potonae at Point of Rocks, and it was considered possible that an attempt on the road would be made. The government has taken every possible precaution in this respect, however. As to the general situation, road would be made. The government has taken every possible precaution in this respect, however. As to the general situation, if the rebels do not get over the Potomac before the present week ends, they will never cross in force. The critical time is now. The government means to put the departmental clerks to drill. We have 50,000 of the new troops here, and if they were 150,000 they would not materially add to the strength of the army for the next ten days. What the government wants most just now is good flabing troops. The new levies need discipline, and an order arming the clerks only causes slarm, and does not strengthen the defenses materially. Of course, this insimulars nothing against the clerks. They are as brave and capable as any other body of clerical men in the land.

THE WAR IN VIRGINIA. during the storm, our troops rested upon the field, having gained a complete victory.

when enddenly they came upon Bitars's robol exactly, who had stated to charge on them. The horses of the opposing exactly were moving at the height of their speed, and so completely enveloped in the cloud of rising dust as to reader them mutually laviable.

The meeting of the hostile cavalry battallons was terrifie. Over 300 men were dissuounted by the suddenness and severity of the shock. Our man captured about 150 prisoners and any quantity of horses and arms. In this counter-charge Col. Brodhead of the 1st Michigan cavairy, was mortally wounded; Copt. Cannon of the 1st Virginia cavairy, feelived two severe wounds; and in company N of this regiment, not a commissioned officer was left. Licut. Paimer killed three men with his sabre; Capt. Keith of Gen. Buford's staff, had his horse killed under him; Thomas Scofield of company D, 1st Virginia cavairy, was killed. The charges of this cavalry not only saved the stragglers from falling into the hands of the enemy, but were of essential service is adding the movements of the whole right wing of the army.

fallen our arms in this campaign are not attributable to the univise exposures of our value reable points by reporters; for we have not been in a position to know or even dream of such matters; consequently the argument that the enemy galaced kno wiedge of our movements and weak points through the press falls to the ground; for not a line has been written from the army to any paper for the last ten days. Yet the enemy have found our weak spots, and have pierced them; have known where to strike, and have struck with vigor and effect. General Halleck's course in excluding reporture from the army is now being fully commented upon, and condemned by every man who has the least deaire to learn facts instead of rumore, and great results instead of official reports. As it is, we have to depend almost entirely upon official bulletins for our news; and the facts of one day often give lie to the official reports of the day before, so that we can form no just idea of the state of affairs until the facts of our reverses become too palpable to be mistaken. Many have an idea that the cause for the recent exclusion order had its origin, not in a fear that the government's plans would be exposed, but that we, as reporters, would not be slow to observe the bloaders of our generals, and would perhaps expose them to a discriminating public. But comments are useless.

Shortly after, the governor's private veretary amounced a message from the governor, which was read by the secretary.

The governor says that when you closed your last regular gosdon, the belief powerled jobr last regular session, the belief powerled very generally that the strength of the rebellion against the general government had been brakes, and your legislation upon some quastions of great public interest was controlled by that belief. The lapse of time has shown that belief to be erronsons, and a change of legislation on those questions has therefore become necessary.

length of this they will be exposed to sate danger of disease and the casualises of battle, will render absolutely necessary a large increase off, the fund provided for their care and consort. The extraordinary expenses of my office have also been and will probably continue to be largely increased, in consequence of the new demands that have been and may be made upon the State. I therefore recommend to your favorable consideration such lacrease of the colitingent fund for extraordinary expenses of this office as will be sufficient to enable me to do for the gallant men who so nobly represent our State in the army of the Union, when suffering from wounds and disease, that which every loyal heart so anxiously desires aboud be done, and also to enable me to carry on successfully the many new and ardious labors imposed upon this office, in promptly responding to all the demands made upon the State for the support of WANTED IMMEDIA WANTED- We wish WANTED FIN WANTED-To Bu

It is of the highest importance that the numerical strength of the regiments from Io was be maintained in the field. Our new regiments will go out full, and the old ones will soon be filled, but in a short time their numbers will be again reduced. To remedy this evil I recommend that, with the approval of the proper federal authorities, a camp of instruction be established at some suitable point in this State, sufficient to accommodate 1,000 men; that the several countries be required to furnish their equitable proportion of that number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under last number of men to place in camp under a supposite composing the regiment were organized, and their places in camp immediately be supplied by new men from the same counties.
